16. Abstract  This research effort is part of a collaborative research project between the North Carolina Department of Transportation (NCDOT) and North Carolina State University's (NC State's) Institute for Transportation Research and Education (ITRE). NCDOT Rail Division's mission is the "...safe and efficient movement of people and goods on North Carolina's railroads through freight, passenger and safety programs, supporting job creation and economic growth." These objectives are integral in serving North Carolina's citizens, visitors, and industries. The ITRE research team, including the principal investigator, has contributed substantially to the literature regarding economic effects of transportation facilities in North Carolina over the past 12 years. The team has led or been a substantial contributor to several statewide studies (aviation, ferry, ports, transit, freight/logistics), in addition to targeted infrastructure economic contribution studies in those and other modes in North Carolina.  The project will seek to understand the economic contribution relating to the usage of the NC rail system. The final deliverables will include a profile of traffic data (freight and passenger) and economic contribution for each, based on passenger spending/economic benefit derived from their use of rail.

System Overview

North Carolina's 3,416 miles of rail are used by 26 railroads, including two Class I railroads and 24 shortlines, to move freight and people both within the state and across the eastern United States. The North Carolina Railroad Company manages the 317-mile rail corridor that stretches from Charlotte to the port of Morehead City, and NC By Train and Amtrak together provide 18 daily passenger trains that carry over half a million people per year.

Freight Rail Contributions

North Carolina's rail system is a transportation backbone for many raw materials, manufactured goods, and over-sized cargo shipped around the state and across the country. Freight rail provides an important means to export North Carolina products to market and to provide vital manufacturing and agricultural inputs that support the North Carolina economy through business revenue and jobs. Freight rail also diverts truck trips from the highway which reduces wear on roadway infrastructure and creates a safer, less congested road network.

With more than 45 million tons of rail freight terminating in North Carolina and another 13 million tons of freight originating in the state, rail provides a cost-effective way to ship manufacturing inputs, finished goods, and raw materials. While most commodities shipped into North Carolina are manufacturing and agricultural inputs (e.g. coal, farm products, chemicals, non-metallic minerals), goods from intermodal facilities account for 18 percent of shipments that originate in the state. Intermodal facilities are transportation hubs connecting multiple modes such as rail, truck, and waterways. The materials and goods transported through rail intermodal facilities include shipments moving through the state's two deepwater ports and other facilities on the North Carolina coast. North Carolina's lumber and wood industries account for 8 percent of rail freight commodities originating in the state.<sup>2</sup>

Passenger Rail Contributions

Passenger rail is an important mode of transportation for North Carolina travelers. It provides the state with economic benefits, including supporting jobs, enabling commercial and business activity and increasing tax revenues. Passenger rail also provides North Carolinians with the benefits of expanded mobility, enhanced community livability, and improved public health benefits (such as increased physical activity and reduction of single vehicle emissions). Additionally, diverting passengers from highways to rail reduces wear on roadway infrastructure, lowers carbon and particulate emissions and creates a safer, less congested road network.

NC By Train's Piedmont and Carolinian services provide 5 round-trips (10 passenger trains) per day between Charlotte and Raleigh, with the Carolinian continuing once per day to New York City. NC By Train transports more than half a million total passengers annually, with over 450,000 starting and/or ending their trip in the state.<sup>3</sup> Amtrak operates four additional long-distance routes (Crescent, Palmetto, Silver Meteor and Silver Star) that connect North Carolina to points across the Atlantic seaboard and the Gulf Coast. The reach of North Carolina's passenger trains is extended by Amtrak Thruway bus routes connecting eight eastern North Carolina counties with the rail network.

Altogether, over 970,000 passengers per year board or alight at the 16 passenger rail stations in North Carolina.<sup>4</sup>

Rail Tourism Contributions

North Carolina is home to several rail tourism attractions. The Great Smoky Mountains Railroad (Bryson City), New Hope Valley Railway (Bonsal), and the North Carolina Transportation Museum (Spencer) account for 410,000 visitors annually. There are also several local rail museums and rail history centers throughout the state.

Environmentally Sustainable

Freight rail is also an environmentally sustainable means of shipping goods and raw materials. Rail can ship 471 tons of freight with one gallon of fuel which creates shipping savings and reduced carbon footprint and greenhouse gas emissions by 75 percent.

About the Study

This ITRE study was funded by a North Carolina Department of Transportation research grant (RP2022-19) and captures the statewide economic contribution of North Carolina's rail system. The research utilizes NCDOT data and ITRE collected data and analyzes the data using an IMPLAN model. The results of the study show that the North Carolina rail systems has an economic impact of over $20 billion and supports 88,000 jobs in the state. The economic contributions of North Carolina's rail system are dispersed throughout the state. This research analyzed 2019 economic data and 2022 ridership data to reflect the most recent complete data and economic impacts while avoiding pandemic induced disruptions.

Introduction

This ITRE study was funded by a North Carolina Department of Transportation research grant (RP2022-19) and captures the statewide economic contribution of North Carolina’s rail system. The research utilizes NCDOT data and ITRE collected data and analyzes the data using an IMPLAN® (Impact analysis for PLANning) model. The results of the study show that the North Carolina rail system has an annual economic impact of over $20 billion and supports 88,000 jobs in the state. The economic contributions of the North Carolina rail are dispersed throughout the state. This research analyzed 2019 economic data and 2022 passenger ridership data to estimate impacts in order to reflect the most recent complete data available while avoiding pandemic-induced disruptions.

Statewide Rail System Overview

North Carolina has 3,416 miles of rail serviced by 26 railroads, including two Class I railroads and 24 short line railroads. Class I railroads are the six largest rail carriers in the nation and create the backbone of the national rail system. Short line railroads are more localized rail carriers with more limited geographic extent. Freight rail is supported by 83 intermodal and transload facilities, where raw materials, manufacturing inputs, agricultural products and finished goods are loaded and unloaded onto freight rail cars. The North Carolina Railroad Company manages the 317-mile rail corridor that stretches from Charlotte to the port of Morehead City. Additionally, the state is served by eight daily Amtrak long-distance passenger trains to destinations across the eastern United States and the Gulf Coast. NC By Train, the state-supported passenger rail service operated under contract by Amtrak, provides an additional ten daily trains between Charlotte and Raleigh, including a daily round-trip continuing beyond Raleigh to New York.

Exhibit 1: Map of rail system and rail infrastructure in North Carolina

In total the state is served by 18 daily Amtrak operated trains (nine round trip services) providing passenger rail service along 563 miles of shared-rail passenger corridor within North Carolina.

Statewide Economic and Job Contributions Results

The North Carolina rail system facilitates over $20 billion in annual economic output.<sup>1</sup> The economic benefits of rail are dispersed throughout the state, with $12.9 billion of the $20 billion occurring outside the direct rail corridor (businesses within a mile of the rail).<sup>1</sup> The economic impact and jobs total account for the economic contributions of freight rail, passenger rail, and rail tourism in the state.

The rail system supports a total of 88,000 jobs, including employees of rail operators, rail-supply industries, employees at rail-utilizing businesses that load directly to rail as part of their business model, and rail-backed jobs in sectors such as natural resources, manufacturing, and tourism. Rail-utilizing businesses were analyzed applying IMPLAN® multipliers to establish their number of rail-supported jobs (see Methodology section). As a key component of the total jobs numbers, rail companies and rail operation services support 5,700 jobs in North Carolina and the 860 businesses that load directly onto the rail support another 18,200 jobs.<sup>1</sup>

North Carolina's rail system supports $990 million in annual state and local tax revenue. Of this $990 million, $580 million is collected by the state government, while $410 million is collected by local governments at the county level and below.<sup>1</sup>

Freight Rail and Rail Operations

North Carolina's rail system is a transportation backbone for shipping many raw materials, manufactured goods, and over-sized cargo around the state and across the country. Freight rail provides an important means to export North Carolina products to market and supplies vital manufacturing and agricultural inputs that support the North Carolina economy through business revenue and jobs. The economic benefits of rail are dispersed throughout the state, with recognized benefits occurring along the rail corridor as well as the economic benefit to businesses and communities outside the direct rail corridor through the vital role that rail plays in the state and national supply chain network. Short line railroads account for 20% of economic output along and within the direct rail corridor.<sup>1</sup> A robust rail supported supply chain network is economically beneficial to many local communities. Access to this supply chain is critical to many businesses and helps attract and anchor certain industries to local communities.

With more than 45 million tons of rail freight terminating in North Carolina and another 13 million tons of freight originating in the state,<sup>2</sup> rail provides a cost-effective way to ship manufacturing inputs, finished goods, and raw materials. Most commodities shipped into North Carolina are manufacturing and agricultural inputs, such as coal, farm products, chemicals, and non-metallic minerals. Finished goods and manufacturing inputs from intermodal facilities account for 18 percent of shipments that originate in the state. Intermodal facilities are transportation hubs connecting multiple modes such as rail, truck, and waterways. The materials and goods transported through rail intermodal facilities include shipments moving through the state's two deepwater ports (Wilmington and Morehead City) and other intermodal facilities on the North Carolina coast. North Carolina's lumber and wood industries account for eight percent (by tonnage) of rail freight commodities originating in the state.<sup>2</sup>

The relationship between the rail system and the coastal ports in North Carolina is also an important and vital element of the state economy. Rail and intermodal facilities and services provide connectivity between North Carolina industries and international markets through NC Ports and other regional ports. Rail services such as the Queen City Express, which is a rail intermodal service between the Port of Wilmington and Charlotte, and the Midwest Express, which is an intermodal lane connecting the Port of Wilmington with the Midwest through the CCX Intermodal Terminal near Rocky Mount, support North Carolina ports and contribute to their economic productivity. The $20 billion in economic contribution from the rail system and the $15.4 billion economic contribution<sup>3</sup> from the port system highlight an important intermodal relationship that helps drive North Carolina's economy.

In addition to economic contributions, the freight rail network in the state also provides intangible benefits that support other state and national industries. Some cargo is too large and cumbersome to be trucked on highways and can only be delivered via rail. One important role of rail in North Carolina is to support the movement of US military equipment and provide connectivity to military installations in the state. The Strategic Rail Corridor Network (STRACNET) military rail corridors that run through the state serve to support the US military mission and national security.

Freight rail also diverts truck trips from the highway which reduces vehicle miles traveled (VMT), fuel consumption, wear on roadway infrastructure, and creates a safer, less congested road network. Moving freight along rail is an environmentally sustainable means of transportation. In 2019, the average freight train carried 3,667 tons of freight per train and can haul 471 ton-miles per gallon of fuel.<sup>2</sup> That fuel-to-tonnage ratio is three to four times more efficient than long-haul trucking and allows freight rail to provide larger shipper savings and a reduced carbon footprint when compared to long distance trucking.<sup>4</sup> Technological advances and new higher capacity railcars have steadily increased fuel efficiency, as a gallon of fuel moved only 396 ton-miles in 2000 and 235 ton-miles in 1980.<sup>4</sup> Fuel economy improvements generate direct cost savings for businesses shipping via rail, and may lead to reductions of harmful emissions. Rail has a reduced carbon footprint compared to shipping freight by truck and can reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 75 percent.<sup>4</sup> These cost savings and reductions in carbon footprint will have an even larger impact in the future, as U.S. freight shipments are expected to increase by 41 percent by 2040.

Making high level assumptions based on national industry averages and state freight tonnage data, the state rail system may divert as many as 21.8 million truck miles each year. If that many truck miles were removed, an estimated 510,492 fewer gallons of fuel would be used each year. The diversion of 21.8 million truck miles a year would yield a $1.9 million reduction of emissions cost and reduce annual pavement maintenance and repair costs up to $2.6 million per year (see Freight Rail VMT Reduction section).

For this study, freight rail and rail operations capture the direct, indirect, and induced impact of freight rail operators (Class I and short lines), intermodal and transload facilities, passenger rail service operations, and infrastructure improvement work. The research team also captured the economic impact of tourism rail which runs on a small section of the rail network. These impacts are captured by a jobs-based, IMPLAN® input/output (I/O) model using ITRE-collected data analyzed.

Passenger Rail

Passenger rail is an important mode of transportation and provides the state with economic benefits, including sustaining jobs, supporting business activity, and generating tax revenues. Additional passenger rail benefits include expanded mobility for non-drivers, increased community livability, and improved public health benefits (such as increased physical activity and reduction of single vehicle emissions). Diverting passengers from the highway to passenger rail also reduces both wear on roadway infrastructure and vehicle miles traveled (VMT) creating a safer, less congested transportation network. Passenger rail in North Carolina is operated by Amtrak, including state-supported NC By Train passenger rail services.

In North Carolina, Amtrak currently operates four national long-distance routes (Crescent, Palmetto, Silver Meteor, and Silver Star) as well as two state-supported NC By Train routes (Piedmont and Carolinian) which in total provide service to 16 stations in North Carolina, with seasonal service to two additional stations. NC By Train's Piedmont service has four roundtrips per day between Charlotte and Raleigh, while the Carolinian provides an additional daily round-trip that extends the service from Charlotte beyond Raleigh through Richmond and Washington, D.C., to New York. With ten passenger trains a day, NC By Train transports over 520,000 total passengers annually, with over 460,000 passengers that start and/or end their trip in North Carolina.<sup>5</sup>

Exhibit 2: Amtrak Thruway Bus Service at Passenger Rail Station

The passenger rail network in the state is extended through Amtrak Thruway Bus Service to eight eastern North Carolina counties and connecting services from 15 local public transit agencies. In total, the Amtrak and NC By Train passenger rail services operate 18 daily trains with 970,000 passengers boarding and alighting at an Amtrak station in North Carolina each year.<sup>5</sup> In July 2023, NC By Train added a fifth round-trip between Charlotte and Raleigh. The system map below shows the passenger rail routes and services in North Carolina.

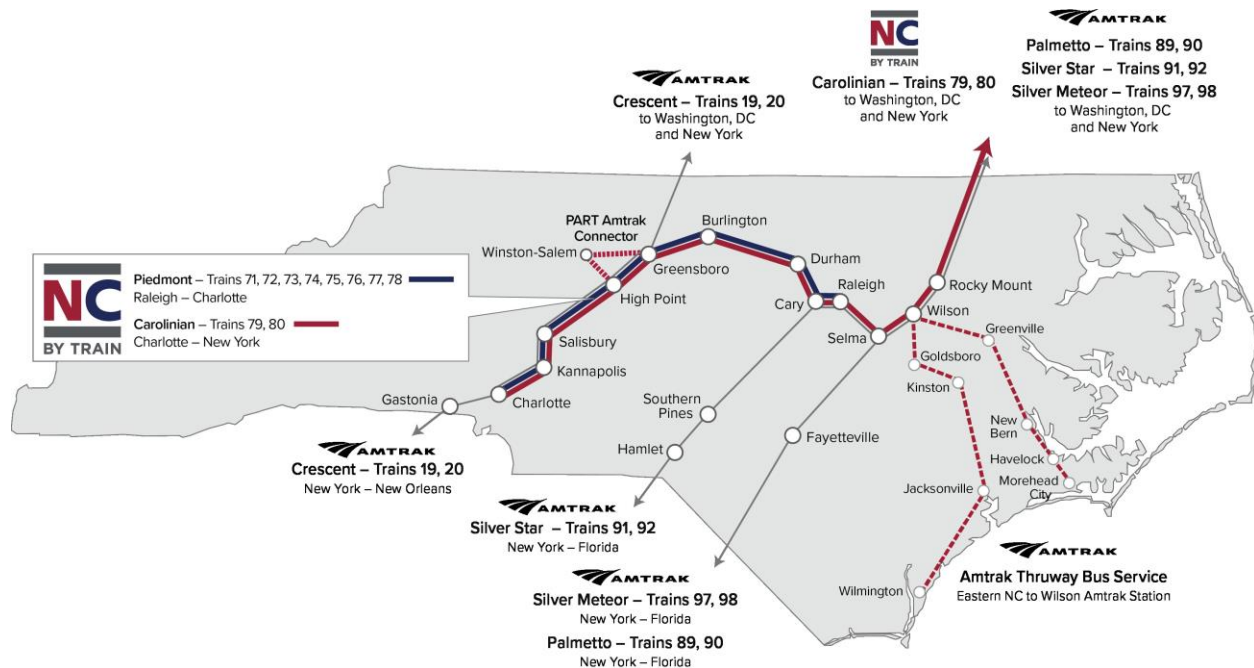

Exhibit 3: Passenger rail routes and services in North Carolina

Nationally, Amtrak operates intercity passenger rail service in the United States with more than 21,000 miles of routes with 500 destinations across 46 states, three Canadian provinces and the District of Columbia. A 2012 study assessed the value of national passenger rail services capturing the economic benefits of passenger rail across the United States, including approximately $19.4 billion in annual congestion cost savings, $12.1 billion in parking cost savings, $22.6 billion in consumer cost savings, and $50 billion in traffic collision cost savings.<sup>6</sup>

The 2015 Benefits of State-Supported Passenger Rail Services in North Carolina study found that the two state-supported passenger rail services, the Piedmont and Carolinian routes, contributed 430 jobs, $20.1 million in earned wages and $30.6 million in gross state product to the state economy.<sup>7</sup>

In 2019, Amtrak employed 162 North Carolina residents and paid $13.9 million in wages to direct Amtrak employees. A 2011 study captured the total jobs and wages impact of Amtrak as providing support for 1,510 jobs, $65 million in wage earnings, and $72.3 million in value added in North Carolina, including procurements for North Carolina vendors and indirect jobs. In 2019, Amtrak spent $56,219,334 procuring goods and services in North Carolina, including nearly $50 million from vendors in RTP and over $2.2 million from Charlotte area vendors.

The research team analyzed the economic contribution of Amtrak and NC By Train in the rail operations analysis as part of an overall input/output (I/O) model designed to capture the economic impacts of passenger rail, freight rail, and rail supported businesses as a single integrated and overlapping system.

Rail Impacts from Railroad Based Tourism

North Carolina is home to several rail tourism attractions. The Great Smoky Mountains Railroad (Bryson City), New Hope Valley Railway (Bonsal), and the North Carolina Transportation Museum (Spencer) host over 410,000 visitors annually. There are also several local rail museums and rail history centers throughout the state. The economic impact for tourism rail is captured in the overall total state economic contribution.

The Great Smoky Mountains Railroad is a tourist rail service in western North Carolina, operating from Dillsboro to Nantahala and serving over 220,000 visitors in 2019.<sup>8</sup> The New Hope Valley Railway, which operates four miles of historic track connecting Bonsal to New Hill, had over 18,000 riders in 2021.<sup>9</sup> The North Carolina Transportation Museum operates touristic services along their line in Spencer, NC. According to the 2019 North Carolina Transportation Museum economic impact study, the museum hosted 158,872 visitors.<sup>10</sup>

This study captures the economic effects of rail tourism as an element of the total economic contribution of the state's rail system. The research team considered rail-based tourism by incorporating existing recent estimates of the economic impact of each of these three attractions into the overall estimates. The annual tourism numbers were compiled with data from the rail tourism service operators.

Methodology

This study captures the economic contribution of rail in North Carolina, including freight rail, passenger rail, rail operations, rail construction, and rail tourism. To capture the economic contributions, the study team utilized an input/output (I/O) model which uses multiplier effects to capture economy-wide impacts. Specifically, the research team utilized IMPLAN® (IMpact analysis for PLANning) to model the economic effects facilitated by NC rail activities, including direct, indirect, and induced effects. This research draws on ITRE collected data and NCDOT provided data as inputs into the IMPLAN® model to establish the jobs supported by rail and to build economic contributions from discrete multipliers for each industrial sector. The use of I/O modeling and the use of IMPLAN® is a widely accepted methodological approach to capture economic impacts. The ITRE research team has extensive experience using these models to capture economic contributions for transportation infrastructure throughout the state.

Using the IMPLAN® software, the direct, indirect, and induced effects of the North Carolina rail system are captured by aggregating economic activity from rail operators, rail-supported businesses and rail-suppliers and support industries. The direct effects capture the economic contribution of employment from rail operations within North Carolina, including rail operators, businesses loading to rail, and rail-industry suppliers in North Carolina. The indirect effects result from jobs supported and income spent in other industries that supply inputs or services to rail in North Carolina, such as fuel, insurance, marketing, etc. The induced effects occur when the employees supported by direct and indirect effects spend the income they earned in North Carolina. This spending supports additional jobs throughout the state.

For this study, freight rail and rail operations capture the direct, indirect, and induced effects of freight rail operators (Class I and short lines), intermodal and transload facilities, passenger rail service operations, rail tourism, rail construction, and infrastructure improvement work. The research team analyzed the economic activities of freight rail, passenger rail, and rail supported businesses as the economic contribution of a single integrated and overlapping system.

Due to the integrated nature of rail infrastructure, with passenger rail operating on freight rail owned track, and the overlap in economic impact from rail infrastructure improvements, it is difficult to isolate freight and passenger rail as separate economic contributions. An example would be track improvements along a main line rail corridor that would provide operational and economic benefits for both freight rail operations and passenger rail operations, which would create economic benefits and jobs. It would be difficult to accurately split the economic impacts between the two. As such, the results were combined into a system-wide total. Isolating the impacts of the two systems could likely lead to an over-counting issue, where some of the same impacts could be captured in both results and ‘double counted’ in the system-wide result. Attempts to separate freight and passenger benefits also risk incorrectly assigning economic impact to one type over the other, as assigning operations improvements would require many assumptions on how to split economic impacts and benefits between freight and passenger rail.

However, the team did isolate railroad and intermodal related construction expenditures for projects completed or ongoing in calendar year 2019. Projects included right-of-way improvement, grade separation, an intermodal facility, and trestle improvement and replacement. Information collected on each project included, when available, the project’s total cost, the allocation of the expenditure between construction sectors, and the start and end date of the project. The economic contributions of these projects were captured and are included in the state-wide economic contribution of over $20 billion.

Data Collection and Analysis

To capture the rail-related businesses and associated employment numbers, the research team utilized Data Axle, a database that has an extensive catalogue of business data including addresses, employment numbers, and North American Industry Classification System (NAICS) codes. Applying geospatial analysis to a data set that included all North Carolina business in Data Axle, the researchers compiled an initial list of all business within one mile of the rail corridor that had a NAICS code that is known to be heavily impacted by rail. For example, businesses in industries such as manufacturing, raw materials, warehousing, and agricultural were captured in the data query along the rail corridor. Businesses that are less directly impacted by rail proximity, such as retail stores or restaurants, were not captured in this initial data query but the impact of these businesses were ultimately captured in the ‘All North Carolina Businesses’ category discussed below.

After these businesses were documented, the research team validated each business using aerial photos, state business registry information, and websites associated with each business. The validation process included removing businesses that were initially identified but that did not meet the industrial profile criteria (such as personal self-storage units or retail stores), as well as adding a small number of industrial sites that were not captured in the initial data review. All validated businesses were coded into one of three categories: (1) direct rail businesses, (2) rail-using businesses, and (3) rail-adjacent businesses. The three categories were used to assign specific jobs multipliers to each business based on their relationship to rail.

Business Validation Categories
Direct Rail Businesses	Rail operators and rail support services including Class I and short lines owners and operators; Amtrak and state-sponsored passenger rail operations and facilities; rail support services such as rail specific construction firms and rail component manufacturers; and multimodal rail yards and transload facilities.
Rail-Using Businesses	Businesses that load directly onto the rail from their business site and/or have an active spur on their property.
Rail-Adjacent Businesses	Businesses that are proximate to rail and could be highly impacted by rail proximity, such as manufacturing, aggregate and raw materials sites, but that do not have direct loading onto the rail.

Exhibit 4. Business validation coding categories and definition for rail related businesses (Source: ITRE developed definition and coding structure)

The ‘direct rail’ category captures all the freight rail operators (such as Class I and short line carriers), rail support services (such as rail construction firms and rail component manufacturers) intermodal and transload facilities, and Amtrak and NC By Train passenger rail operations. These businesses are captured at the highest weighted jobs and economic multipliers. While many of the direct rail businesses are located within the rail corridor, some of the businesses and functions, such as corporate headquarters and some rail support industries, are located outside the rail corridor but are included in this category. Rail support and supplier industries in North Carolina captured in this category include rail specific construction firms, rail component manufacturers (such as rail bearings, fasteners, and track ties), and rail support software development. All the jobs associated with direct rail and rail support businesses are weighted at 100 percent, indicating that all jobs are considered rail supported.

‘Rail-using’ businesses rely on freight rail for shipments to and from their facilities. Thus, a portion of the total employment for these businesses can be attributed to the use of the rail network. IMPLAN® multipliers were used to derive the percentage of employment attributed to rail use.

Those businesses coded as ‘rail-adjacent’ captured establishments within the rail corridor that could be impacted by utilizing rail but whose sites were not directly connected to the rail network. While those businesses likely have inputs or outputs that are shipped by rail at some point in their lifecycle, those components would be routed through intermodal connections and likely shipped by multiple modes such as rail, truck and/or waterways. The economic contribution of these businesses is captured as a smaller percentage of their jobs and economic output relative to rail-using businesses. After validating these businesses, the research team applied IMPLAN® multipliers to these businesses based on their primary NAICS code, reflecting the understanding that the supported jobs, economic output, and shipper cost savings associated with those businesses is less influenced by proximity and more comparable to businesses with the same NAICS code throughout the state. Using the Data Axle database, the research team applied IMPLAN® multipliers, based on each business’s NAICS code, for all other North Carolina businesses. This process yielded the total number of rail impacted jobs outside of the rail corridor.

After capturing and coding these businesses, ITRE compiled the number of employees and the number of businesses in each category. For example, the number of current workers being employed by the 90 direct rail businesses in the state (including rail operators and rail support services) is 2,500. For rail-using businesses, 6,000 workers are employed by the 860 businesses utilizing rail directly from their site. These job numbers served as the base set of employment data used as the input into the I/O model economic analysis.

Online Mapping of Rail Businesses

As a part of the research project, the businesses within the corridor were mapped and are being published on an online GIS platform. The online map presents rail lines, rail yards, intermodal and transload facilities, businesses shipping directly on the rail, and industrial parks within the rail corridor. The map has been designed with an edit request feature that allows map users to suggest updates and changes that would then be reviewed and approved by a map administrator. This will allow businesses and industrial parks to ensure their information is captured and displayed correctly and allow ITRE and/or NCDOT to easily keep the map up-to-date with verified user-reported data.

The website for the map is: <https://go.ncsu.edu/rail-businesses>

NC By Train and Amtrak Long Distance Ridership Analysis

The study also analyzed NC By Train and Amtrak ridership data provided by the NCDOT Rail Division to examine utilization of North Carolina passenger rail service. The research team examined a six-year dataset of ridership statistics from 2017 to 2022 which captured the pandemic induced disruptions and documented the recovery and growth of NC By Train and Amtrak ridership.

The ridership data presented in Exhibit 6 and Exhibit 7 present the number of riders that took NC By Train within, to or from North Carolina or rode the NC By Train Carolinian service outside the state. NC By Train passenger trips fall into one of three possible scenarios:

- Within N.C. (Category 1): Trip started and ended within North Carolina (both their origin and destination are at an N.C. station).
- To/From N.C. (Category 2): Trip either started or ended in North Carolina (but not both).
- External (Category 3): Trip neither started nor ended in North Carolina but they rode the NC By Train - Carolinian service.

In 2022, the within and to/from passengers (Categories 1 and 2) accounted for more than 462,000 passengers and the total NC By Train ridership (all three categories) was over 522,000 passengers.

Exhibit 6: NC By Train passenger rail ridership for 2017-2022 (Table)
 (Source: NCDOT Ridership Data and ITRE Analysis)

The ridership data expectedly shows that, while ridership dropped during the pandemic-induced disruption years of 2020 and 2021, the 2022 ridership reached and exceeded 2019 levels. In 2022, ridership within North Carolina grew seven percent over 2019, while ridership to or from North Carolina on the Carolinian grew 27 percent. Combining these ridership categories, all passengers who had at least one end of their trip in North Carolina were up 13 percent over 2019.

Exhibit 7: NC By Train passenger rail ridership for 2017-2022 (Chart)
 (Source: NCDOT Ridership Data and ITRE Analysis)

In addition to the annual growth captured in the data, NC By Train broke monthly ridership records in the fall of 2022. The months of September and October saw the highest ridership in the history of the NC By Train service with ridership of 48,488 passengers in September and 55,493 passengers in October.<sup>11</sup>

State passenger miles travelled also increased from over 75 million in 2019 to over 90 million in 2022. This 21 percent increase in rail passenger miles highlights the increased potential for passenger rail to divert vehicles from the roadway and reduce vehicle miles travelled (VMT). While a comparison of rail passenger miles to vehicle roadway miles is not a one-to-one ratio, the 90 million passenger rail miles is expected to have diverted large number of vehicle traffic from the roadway. For example, making a vehicle occupancy assumption using the FHWA (2017) vehicle occupancy rate of 1.67 (for all trip purposes)<sup>12</sup> would yield a VMT reduction of nearly 55 million vehicle miles on the roadway. With over 310,000 passengers traveling within the state along routes that run parallel to interstates I-40, I-85, and I-95 (with most of those riders along the Raleigh-to-Charlotte corridor), the passenger miles are diverted from high volume and highly congested roadways.

Utilizing Amtrak long distance service data, the research team also compared NC By Train and Amtrak ridership and pandemic ridership recovery rates. Overall rail ridership in North Carolina (both NC By Train and Amtrak) was two percent higher in 2022 than in 2017 and was one and a half percent lower than 2019 overall ridership. The overall decline from 2019 to 2022 is due to the underperformance of Amtrak's long-distance services during the pandemic and a slow post-pandemic recovery. NC By Train 2022 ridership is 13 percent higher than 2019. NC By Train has also increased its share of N.C. rail ridership, as the ridership share of the state-sponsored services has risen from 60 percent of rail ridership in 2017 to 72 percent of rail ridership in 2022 as shown in Exhibit 8 and Exhibit 9 below.

The underperformance of Amtrak long-distance ridership is not simply explained by NC By Train serving many in-state passengers while Amtrak's long-distance services serve mostly interstate passengers. NC By Train has seen a stronger recovery in ridership traveling into or out of the state on NC By Train services than ridership recovery among riders within North Carolina. NC By Train ridership within the state has increased seven percent while riders traveling to or from the state is up 27 percent from 2019 ridership.

Ridership on Amtrak's Thruway Bus Service has also been significantly impacted compared to pre-pandemic ridership as shown in Exhibit 11 below.

Freight Rail VMT Reduction, Emissions and Pavement Maintenance Benefits

Approximately 85.1 million tons of freight are transported annually over North Carolina’s railroads according to the North Carolina Statewide Multimodal Freight Plan.<sup>13</sup> If this cargo were diverted to trucks, it would have a substantial impact on North Carolina’s environment and its roadways.

According to the American Association of Railroads, one gallon of diesel fuel can be used to transport a ton of freight cargo 500 miles.<sup>14</sup> This level of fuel efficiency far outpaces truck transportation; transporting freight by train is estimated to be three-to-four times more efficient than long-haul trucking.<sup>15</sup>

Drawing from findings of the American Association of Railroads and the North Carolina Statewide Multimodal Freight Plan, North Carolina’s freight trains consumed approximately 170,164 gallons of fuel to transport 85.1 million freight-tons.<sup>16</sup> If North Carolina’s freight train cargo were instead transported by truck, it would require approximately 510,492 gallons of fuel.<sup>17</sup> Freight diversion to truck would therefore lead to an additional $1.9 million in estimated annual emissions costs (see Exhibit 13).<sup>18</sup>

Pollutant	Grams / Gallon	Annual Grams	Metric Tons	Cost / Metric Ton	Annual Rail Emissions Cost	Annual Trucking Emissions Cost	Net Difference
CO2	10,151	1,727,402,319	1,727.40	$56	$96,700	$338,450	$241,750
CO	0.8	136,131	0.14	$6,368	$900	$3,150	$2,250
PM	2.6	442,426	0.44	$796,700	$352,500	$1,233,750	$881,250
HC	4.5	765,738	0.77	$2,320	$1,800	$6,300	$4,500
NOx	112	19,058,368	19.06	$16,600	$316,400	$1,107,400	$791,000
Total					$768,300	$2,689,050	$1,920,750

Exhibit 13: Emissions quantities and monetized social costs avoided due to freight rail transport (Source: ITRE Analysis, 2023)

If all of North Carolina’s 85.1 million tons of freight traveling over 108,296 train miles<sup>19</sup> were diverted to long-haul trucking, it would have a substantial impact on highway infrastructure costs. According to the American Association of Railroads, hundreds of trucks would be required to transport the cargo of just one freight train. Therefore, if all freight rail cargo were diverted to trucks, it would require approximately 21.8 million truck miles to transport the freight cargo. Freight diversion to trucks would therefore lead to an additional $2.6 million in estimated annual pavement costs (see Exhibit 14).

Property Tax Valuation Statewide

In the 2019-2020 reporting cycle, railroad properties were valued at over $1.3 billion. Rail accounts for 37 percent of all valuation captured by transportation companies in North Carolina, with air carriers being the mode with the second highest relative property valuation at 36 percent as shown below in Exhibit 15.

*Exhibit 15. Tax valuation by transportation mode

Comparing the 2014-2015 tax valuation to the 2019-2020 valuation, railroad system valuation increased by nearly $83 million and non-system value increased by over $11 million. After equalization adjustments, the total 100% valuation for railroad properties in the state increased by nearly $49 million. These property tax valuations are distributed based on track miles and usage to local taxing authorities and are collected as county and local tax revenue (see Exhibit 16).

Five Year Change in Tax Valuation for Rail
Year	System Valuation	Non-system Valuation	100% Valuation
2019-2020	$1,289,282,174	$86,140,581	$ 1,321,564,783
2014-2015	$1,206,460,676	$74,662,394	$1,272,674,364
5 Year Change	$82,821,498	$11,478,187	$48,890,419

*Exhibit 16. Tax valuation change for rail

Railroad property valuation is broken down into three categories: system valuation, non-system valuation and, total 100% valuation. For public service companies, including railroads, system property is “real property and personal property used by a public service company in its public service activities” and includes “property under construction on the day as of which property is assessed which when completed will be used by the owner in its public service activities”.<sup>20</sup> The total 100% valuation, captures the valuation after the requisite equalization adjustment (meaning that total 100% valuation is not simply the sum of system and non-system valuation). System property tax valuations for railroads are “allocated for taxation to the local taxing units in accordance with the ratio of the miles of all the company's tracks in the local taxing unit to the total miles of all the company's tracks in this State, adjusted to reflect density of traffic in the local taxing unit”.<sup>21</sup>

Final Results and Conclusions

This study presents the statewide economic contribution of North Carolina’s rail system and highlights the value of the state’s rail system, both within the rail corridor and throughout the state. Using the IMPLAN® software, the research uses a jobs-based approach for modeling the economic contribution of rail. The direct, indirect, and induced effects of the North Carolina rail system are captured by evaluating economic activities stemming from rail operators, rail-supported businesses and rail-suppliers and support industries. The direct effects capture the economic contribution of employment from rail operations within North Carolina, including rail operators, businesses loading to rail, and rail-industry suppliers in North Carolina. The indirect effects result from jobs supported and income spent in other industries that supply inputs or services to rail in North Carolina, such as fuel, insurance, marketing, etc. Induced economic activity results from the spending of income generated through both the direct and indirect effects. The induced effects occur when passenger or freight employees or the employees of freight rail suppliers spend their earned income in North Carolina. This spending supports additional jobs throughout the state. The collective impact of the direct, indirect, and induced employment numbers yields the total number of supported jobs as shown in Exhibit 17 below.

(Source: ITRE Analysis using IMPLAN®)*

To quantify the economic contribution of the 88,000 rail supported jobs, the analysis captures labor income and value added. The combined economic impact of labor income and added value results in the total economic output. The research found that rail in North Carolina provided $20 billion of annual economic contribution and supported 88,000 jobs in the state. This includes capturing the supported jobs and economic contribution of businesses that benefit from the rail system, including the 860 businesses that rely on rail shipping directly from their site.

Outside of Rail Corridor (in N.C.)	$12.9 Billion
Total Jobs Supported	88,000

*Exhibit 18. Statewide economic contribution supported by rail in North Carolina
(Source: ITRE Analysis)*

The study highlights the importance of North Carolina’s rail system on the statewide economy and provides a baseline measure for the economic contribution of the rail system. The data and research methodology were designed in a manner that it could be continued by providing updates to the study as needed and establish a multiyear dataset to compare and track the impact of the state’s rail system over time.

† Valuation of public service companies subject to appraisal by the Property Tax Section.

Information compiled from property tax assessed valuation data provided by the NCDOR Local Government Division.

The above presentation incorporates revised valuations and may differ from alternative previously compiled public service company valuation data for 2019.

System valuation means the real property and tangible personal property used by a public service company but not used in its public service activities.

Non-system valuation means the real and personal property owned by a public service company but not used in its public service activities.

†† System valuation shown in the table is the original appraised system property value prior to equalization adjustment performed in accordance with the Railroad Revitalization Regulatory Reform Act (4-R Act); the 4-R Act requires an equalization adjustment to rail values when the county sales assessment ratio analysis is less than 95%. The total 100% valuation (base to which tax rate is applied to derive levy) reflects the equalized system value. The total 100% valuation is not equal to the sum of the system valuation plus non-system valuation for a county affected by equalization adjustments.

††† Airline Companies, Busline Companies, and Motor Freight Carrier Companies. System valuation and total valuation are the same in all 100 counties.
